Anvil Cottage
Aultmore by Keith

Anvil Cottage, Aultmore by Keith

Anvil Cottage was built in 1894 by a local blacksmith as a home for his family.

This very attractive, traditional stone-built cottage has recently been extensively renovated to a detailed and thoroughly thought out high specification. The standard now represents very comfortable and luxuriously sleek boutique style accommodation.

The accommodation comprises a well-appointed, fitted kitchen with built-in fridge/freezer, dishwasher, washing machine, microwave and ceramic hob and oven. There is also a breakfast area, which seats four.

The dining room, which faces south, has generous seating for four and overlooks a well-maintained landscaped garden.

The lounge area, a light and airy space, provides a warm and intimate atmosphere thanks to the wood-burning stove and the comfortable, inviting sofas.

Upstairs, the accommodation comprises two large double bedrooms and a spacious bathroom. The bedrooms, which both enjoy south views over the expansive farming landscape of Moray towards the imposing bulk of Ben Rhinnes, are amply provided with storage and hanging space for clothes.

The luxurious bathroom, finished throughout in porcelain tiling, benefits from underfloor heating. A large, open, walk-in shower provides the perfect antidote to an exhausting holiday schedule.

Outside there are fully landscaped gardens to the front and rear of the cottage, a log shed and two seating areas with good 'all round the day' sunny spots.

Aultmore, a small hamlet established around the Aultmore Distillery, is approximately 2 miles from Keith and is an ideal spot from which to explore the Moray countryside, visit the many distilleries or go shopping.
